

Annotated Bibliography

S. (2019). Environmental Justice: The Economics of Race, Place, and Pollution. Retrieved July 06, 2020, from <https://www-jstor-org.libproxy.lib.unc.edu/stable/26566983?pq-origsite=summon>

This text is just a debriefing of the Grassroots Movement which took place in the late 1970's which placed environmental injustice in the forefront of national current issues of the time. Along with the discussion of environmental injustice in America it talks about the literature brought up due to the injustices brought to light by the movement.

McCauley, D., & Heffron, R. (2018). Retrieved July 06, 2020, from <https://www-sciencedirect-com.libproxy.lib.unc.edu/science/article/pii/S0301421518302301?via=ihub>

This text describes the integrating of climate, energy, and environmental injustices and how that becomes something called "Just Transition". The frameworks of this aim to look at and tackle environmental issues before that are a major problem affecting people and environments.

Environmental Justice & Environmental Racism. (n.d.). Retrieved July 06, 2020, from <http://greenaction.org/what-is-environmental-justice/>

This article is just a description of a clear, easily understandable, definition of what environmental racism is and its causes and effects. It also goes into depth about environmental justice and its principles and what it means to carry out this justice so that everyone can have the same health and environmental conditions.